2004 Institute for Law and Economic Policy

Protecting the Public: The Role of Private and Public Attorneys' General

Earlier versions of the following Articles were presented at a conference sponsored by the Institute for Law and Economic Policy on April 23 and 24, 2004. The VANDERBILT LAW REVIEW would like to thank those who made the event possible, especially the Institute for Law and Economic Policy, which provided the driving vision and resources for the issue.

The Institute for Law and Economic Policy formulates policy positions on issues involving the administration of civil justice within the American legal system. These issues include existing legal protections of all consumers and protection of the public interest in maintaining a safe environment. In addition, ILEP focuses on the issues of government regulation, preservation of competition, and free and fair markets. Inquiries regarding ILEP should be directed to Edward Labaton, Esq., President, Sandra Stein, Esq., Executive Vice President, or Laura Stein, Special Counsel, 1845 Walnut Street, Suite 945, Philadelphia, PA 19103.
